In diebus illis cum esset Jesus in templo et discipuli eius circumstantes eum dicebant ei: Domine da nobis panem hunc et comedemus.

Unlike his contemporaries, who had a paragon of manly affections in the person of a monarch, and of the strongest community reference, this young vicar was a solitary figure in the world, and in respect to his life, like a Christian, without any particular connection.

In the first century, Christians were persecuted for their faith. The Roman Emperor Nero was responsible for the persecution of Christians in Rome. The Christians were accused of being the cause of the great fire of Rome in 64 AD. They were tortured and killed. The persecution continued for several years. The Christians were not allowed to practice their religion. They were not allowed to meet in groups. They were not allowed to preach. The persecution was a dark time for the Christians. They were persecuted for their faith. They were persecuted for their love of God. They were persecuted for their love of each other. The persecution was a test of their faith. They passed the test. They remained faithful to God. They remained faithful to each other. The persecution was a time of great suffering. But it was also a time of great joy. The Christians were happy to suffer for their faith. They were happy to die for their faith. The persecution was a time of great trial. But it was also a time of great triumph. The Christians were victorious over their persecutors. They were victorious over death. They were victorious over the world. The persecution was a time of great darkness. But it was also a time of great light. The Christians were the light of the world. They were the salt of the earth. They were the hope of the world. The persecution was a time of great sorrow. But it was also a time of great joy. The Christians were joyful in their suffering. They were joyful in their persecution. They were joyful in their love of God. They were joyful in their love of each other. The persecution was a time of great pain. But it was also a time of great peace. The Christians were at peace with God. They were at peace with each other. They were at peace with the world. The persecution was a time of great conflict. But it was also a time of great unity. The Christians were united in their faith. They were united in their love of God. They were united in their love of each other. The persecution was a time of great division. But it was also a time of great reconciliation. The Christians were reconciled to God. They were reconciled to each other. They were reconciled to the world. The persecution was a time of great loss. But it was also a time of great gain. The Christians gained their faith. They gained their love of God. They gained their love of each other. The persecution was a time of great despair. But it was also a time of great hope. The Christians had hope in God. They had hope in each other. They had hope in the world. The persecution was a time of great fear. But it was also a time of great courage. The Christians were courageous in their faith. They were courageous in their love of God. They were courageous in their love of each other. The persecution was a time of great weakness. But it was also a time of great strength. The Christians were strong in their faith. They were strong in their love of God. They were strong in their love of each other. The persecution was a time of great defeat. But it was also a time of great victory. The Christians were victorious over their persecutors. They were victorious over death. They were victorious over the world. The persecution was a time of great loss. But it was also a time of great gain. The Christians gained their faith. They gained their love of God. They gained their love of each other. The persecution was a time of great despair. But it was also a time of great hope. The Christians had hope in God. They had hope in each other.
